

Colourful new design career

SANDRA Dorney went to the International School of Colour and Design to satisfy her creative urges.

She never expected she would now be running her own freelance design business.

The Mosman resident set up Sandra Dorney Designs after attending the Styling With Colour short course at the North Sydney-based design school.

Dorney designed a jewellery range and it was picked up by luxury jewellery house Levendi Sydney.

The design school will open its doors at 99 Mount St, North Sydney, at 10am on Saturday to show people what it is like to be a colourist, stylist or designer.

People can find out about courses and get guidance and expert advice from professional designers.
